Gunman kills at least five, injures others in Maryland newsroom

It's believed that the suspect, a white male adult in his 20s, acted alone in the shooting.

A gunman killed at least five people and "gravely injured" at least three others when he sprayed a newsroom in the Maryland capital of Annapolis with gunfire on Thursday, authorities said.

The suspect, identified as 38-year-old Jarrod Warren Ramos, was arrested soon after the attack at the Capital Gazette's office without exchanging gunfire with police. Police said they did not know his motive but believe the suspect, a white male adult who used a long gun, acted alone.

Phil Davis, a Capital Gazette crime reporter who was in the building at the time of the shooting, said in an interview with the Baltimore Sun that the newsroom looked "like a war zone."

Davis and others were hiding under their desks when the shooter stopped firing, the Capital Gazette reported. The company runs multiple newspapers out of its Annapolis office.

"I don't know why he stopped," said Davis. "But as much as I'm going to try to articulate how traumatizing it is to be hiding under your desk, you don't know until you're there and you feel helpless."

Davis said later that he was safe and being interviewed by police.

One law enforcement source told CBS News the suspect was a male in his 20s who had no identification on him. Two law enforcement sources told CBS News the suspect used a shotgun and CNN reported he was not being cooperative with police.

Police recovered something they thought might have been an explosive device. Some 170 people were evacuated from the building, which has been secured, police said.

Law enforcement in Baltimore and New York City deployed extra officers to the office of the New York Times and other major media outlets as a precaution, authorities said.

"There is no active threat at this time," said Officer Andrew Lava, a New York police spokesman.

The Annapolis shooting is being treated as a local incident and not one that involves terrorism, said law enforcement. The Federal Bureau of Investigation is on the scene assisting local authorities, the official said.

President Donald Trump was briefed about the shooting, White House spokeswoman Lindsay Walters said.

"My thoughts and prayers are with the victims and their families. Thank you to all of the First Responders who are currently on the scene," Trump said in a tweet.

Capital Gazette publishes a stable of newspapers in and around Annapolis, home of the U.S. Naval Academy. The oldest of them traces its roots to the early 1700s. The papers have thrived by focusing on local news in the shadows of two much larger competitors, the Washington Post and the Baltimore Sun. REUTERS

SHOOTING SUSPECT IDENTIFIED

ANNE ARUNDEL POLICE DEPARTMENT

Multiple media outlets identified Thursday's Capital Gazette shooting suspect as Jarrod Warren Ramos, 38, of Laurel, Maryland. The Baltimore Sun reported that Ramos in 2012 filed a defamation lawsuit against the paper and a columnist, Eric Hartley, over a story published in 2011 about a criminal harassment claim that was filed against him.

On Thursday, Ramos allegedly walked into the offices of the Gazette, opening fire, killing five and injuring several others.

The New York Times identified the victims as editorial page editor Gerald Fischman, 61; editor and columnist, Rob Hiaasen, 59; sports reporter John McNamara, 56; Wendi Winters, 65, a local news reporter and community columnist; and sales assistant Rebecca Smith. JEFF TOMKO

As if it wasn't bad enough for New Yorkers to face a rainy commute Thursday morning, the storm is ushering in a heat wave that's expected to stick around until at least Monday, according to the National Weather Service (NWS), which declares a heat wave when there is at least three consecutive days of 90 degree heat.

NWS forecasters expect the heat wave to start Friday, when it will be humid and sunny with a high near 92, setting a precedence of sunny skies, humidity and temperatures in the low- to mid-90s through Monday.

Tuesday is forecasted to dip back into the high 80s with mostly sunny skies while the Fourth of July is expected to be partly sunny with a high near 88.

SOME TIPS FOR SURVIVING A HEAT WAVE IN NEW YORK CITY

- Know the signs of heat-related illness, which include headache, lightheadedness, muscle cramps, nausea or vomiting. Call 911 if you or someone else show any signs.
- Stay hydrated — even if you don't feel thirsty. And be sure to keep your pets hydrated on their walks too.
- Stay out of the sun if possible but if you have to be outside, be sure to wear at least SPF 15 and a hat for protection and dress in lightweight, light-colored, loose clothing.
- Avoid strenuous activity, especially during the peak sun hours between 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.
- If you don't have an air conditioner, consider going to one of the city's public pools or air-conditioned areas like malls, movie theaters or one of the city's many cooling centers — you can find your nearest cooling center via 311.

#FamiliesBelongTogether march in NYC set for Saturday

New York will join dozens of cities in a day of action to demand an end to the separation of immigrant children from their families.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
morgan@metro.us

Thousands of irate protesters are expected to attend a march in New York City this Saturday to demand an end to the separation of immigrant children from their families. The End Family Separation NYC Rally and March is one of several similar #FamiliesBelongTogether events planned across the U.S. this weekend in response to the Trump administration's zero tolerance immigration policy and the subsequent separation and detention of more than 2,500 children and infants at the U.S.-Mexico border.

New York's family separation rally will come more than a week after President Donald Trump signed an executive order ending the short-lived and highly unpopular family-separation policy, but there is still no definitive plan as to how those thousands of reportedly traumatized children will be reunited with their families.

Organizers of Saturday's family separation protest, Rise and Resist, called the conditions in which children were being detained "deplorable" and described the Trump policy as "un-American."

"Families belong together, and we need to end this — NOW!" organizers wrote on the rally's Facebook page.

When and where is the Family Separation NYC Rally and March?

"We hope to see thousands of people in the streets and at the border on June 30th demanding this policy end."

Organizers of Saturday's family separation protest

"We hope to see thousands of people in the streets and at the border on June 30th demanding this policy end," organizers wrote, adding that anyone attending the New York rally should commit to participating "nonviolently and in accordance with the law."

More than 7,000 people said on Facebook that they will attend Saturday's NYC march, with another 15,000 people expressing interest.

ABOUT RISE AND RESIST NY

The organizers of Saturday's family separation protest describes itself on Twitter as "a direct action group committed to opposing, disrupting, and defeating any government act that threatens democracy, equality, and our civil liberties." The group was also planning a protest in Foley Square Tuesday evening in response to the Supreme Court's ruling to uphold Trump's Muslim travel ban.

"It's crucial that we have a visible, strong presence across the country of people who care about Muslim and refugee communities and oppose Trump's White Nationalist agenda," organizers said of the #StandWithMuslims in NY protest.

In celebration of its 10th anniversary, Queens Jazz Orchestra will honor iconic longtime leader Jimmy Heath at Flushing Town Hall. QUEENS JAZZ ORCHESTRA

Queens Jazz Orchestra turns 10, honors iconic leader Jimmy Heath

The 91-year-old talks about his mentor Dizzy Gillespie and his eight-decade career.

nikki.mascali@metro.us

Queens has a storied history when it comes to jazz, from venues that celebrated the iconic genre to many of its greatest artists — like Duke Ellington, Louis Armstrong, John Coltrane and Dizzy Gillespie, to name a few — calling the borough home.

For decades, Flushing Town Hall has carried Queens' torch for jazz, and on Friday, the Queens Jazz Orchestra will celebrate its 10th anniversary at the venue — and honor longtime leader Jimmy Heath, 91, who played with many of jazz's greatest musicians over the course of his impressive eight-decade career as a composer, saxophonist, arranger and big-band leader.

What's been most exciting to see over the past 10 years with the Queens Jazz Orchestra?
I always had a great time, and we played a lot of the music of the jazz musicians that were on the Queens Jazz Trail and all the important members who passed away. This time I'm playing mostly my music, but there are some things dedicated to the musicians I played with in the past.

How important is it to keep this music alive, especially for younger generations?
Oh, it's very important because what was good is good. If music was good at one time in the past, it's still good — it may not be featured as much in the media, which sets the standard economically, not necessarily artistically.

> "This time I'm playing mostly my music, but there are some things dedicated to the musicians I played with in the past."
> Jimmy Heath

Is there any contemporary music or musicians you think could have the longevity you've been able to have?
I don't see the longevity of today's music, but there's some I like, and some I don't. I know how to curse privately, so I don't need a recording telling me how to curse. [Laughs]

You've played with just about every notable jazz musician. Is there one you enjoyed playing with most?
Oh, yes. One person who was my mentor and I played with him on many occasions as far back as 1948 or '49 was Dizzy Gillespie.

What was so special about Dizzy?
Dizzy Gillespie was one of the creators of the genre called bebop, and it's still ongoing. It's an advanced style of improvisation, and Dizzy was always at the keyboard and showing all those who performed with him things they didn't know. He was so advanced and so special in his knowledge. He was a person of a great sense of humor. That's why they called him Dizzy.

What was the first jazz song you remember hearing?
One of them was a Duke Ellington recording called "C Jam Blues." My parents had jazz records in the house, and I had three brothers. My older brother Percy played the bass with the Modern Jazz Quartet for 30 years, and my younger brother, Albert "Tootie," we played together all the time in the Heath Brothers. It was always in our home — jazz music was the music of the day when we were raised up.

What is one thing you want New Yorkers to know about Queens' jazz history?
I'm really appreciative of the fact that they're still doing it at Flushing Town Hall. Even though the culture of the area has changed, we still have the music from it. The music we play is African-American classical music, and it's accepted and enjoyed around the world, sometimes more than in our own country.

THE FOREMAN FORECAST: THE BLAZING CENTER

ANALYSIS

TOM FOREMAN

CNN's Tom Foreman is the author of the book "My Year of Running Dangerously."

GETTY IMAGES

In the wake of this week's primary elections, I have a suggestion. Spend a couple of hours in the wildfire of uninformed opinion we call social media. And don't look at the sites you already like, but pass a little time in those blazing corners you'd rather avoid that are crackling with comments about politics, society and your mother's virtue. I dare you. You may not come across many facts or well-sourced stories, but you will find one area of sizzling agreement between the far left and far right: They both despise the middle.

The latest voting drove that home, with the headlines dominated by a young progressive booting a mainstream Democrat in New York, and Trumpers driving more traditional Republicans into retreat elsewhere. With increasing vigor, the acolytes of extremism are setting fire to every tender shoot of moderation. Talk of compromise on immigration reform, a unified approach to entitlements or bipartisan cooperation on … well, anything? Burn it all to the ground.

The fervor is understandable. On the right, Trumpland is loaded with archconservatives who feel their greatest beliefs (the very soul of American exceptionalism in their eyes) have been under liberal assault for years. On the left, progressives are seething over what they view as a burgeoning dictatorship wrapped in racist robes. Both sides fear if the other gains one more ounce of power, the nation will become unlivable for them and their kind. And both sides are treating any talk about finding an agreeable middle, as a sort of neo-treason.

The result? Voters this fall will find ballots in many places littered with fierce ideologues betting everything on an outright win for their side.

SUBWAY NOSE PICKERS, YAWNERS, SNEEZERS, OH MY!
Maybe I missed reading these Grumbles or maybe people don't want to bring them up, but why do some people actually seem to enjoy digging in their noses while on a crowded subway? Gross! Why can't people cover their mouths when they yawn so others don't have to stare into their pie holes? And finally, sneezing into your hand instead of the inside of your elbow just spreads germs everywhere. People are so tuned out to what's going on around them, they act as if they're in the privacy of their own homes and the rest of us have to endure their grossness because of it.

I WANT MY DELI SANDWICH CUT PROPERLY!!!
When I'm busy running around the city, come lunchtime I'll usually stop at a delicatessen and buy a sandwich and something to drink. Then I find a bench somewhere and sit to enjoy my sandwich. It is always cut in half but not all the way through, forcing me to pull it apart. That's where my meal falls apart. Why can't deli people cut the sandwich ALL THE WAY THROUGH?

LEARN HOW TO RECYCLE!
Why oh why are NYC residents having such trouble sorting their recyclables? At the office, we have a single-stream recycling bin to toss all paper, metals and plastics. There are black garbage bins for all non-recyclables.

Each day, the black bags are filled with bottles, plastics, foil. It is heartbreaking. These items will find their way into the ocean and landfill. Ironically, the recycle bin is filled with garbage, used tissues and paper towels. It is not that difficult, people. Please recycle, for the sake of this planet and future generations. Thank you!

'Violence is not fought with more violence'
BENICIO DEL TORO

The actor stars in the new film 'Sicario: Day of the Soldado,' which shows in detail the violence at the Mexican and U.S. border.

PATRICIA CARRANZA MWN
letters@metro.us

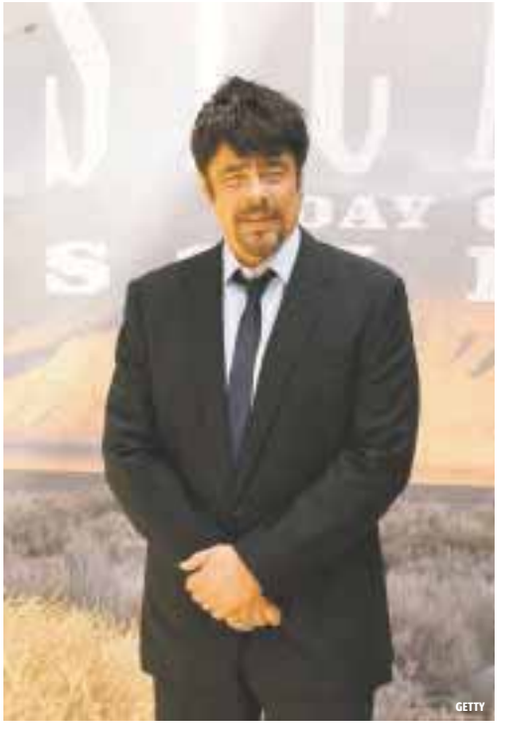
Problems at the border between Mexico and the United States have become a major subject on which many celebrities have been raising their voices, along with all the violence the region is experiencing. Benicio del Toro recently told Metro that he believes more violence isn't what is needed to quell the murders, discrimination and horrors that many individuals and families face in that part of the world. "We must emphasize that violence is not fought with more violence," del Toro says.

The 51-year-old actor tackles these heavy subjects in the new action thriller "Sicario: Day of the Soldado," a sequel to the 2015 hit "Sicario." The follow-up revolves around the U.S. government investigating the relationship between drug cartels and Islamic terrorists. A federal agent, played by Josh Brolin, seeks the help of del Toro's Alejandro in order to provoke a war between the cartels.

Ahead, del Toro opens up about making the sequel, the main message of the film and more.

What was it like working on the sequel?
It was very hard work. I always focus a lot on my characters, and this required a lot of physical effort, but I'm used to it. I have always liked to work on these kinds of movies with a lot of action, fiction stories based on real moments.

Did your perception of the problems at the Mexican-U.S. border change after making the film?
It's really something that I've known has been happening. It's not something new for me, mainly because I've been immersed in films of this kind since I started my career. Specifically, on the subject of violence at the border, I have always tried to stay informed about what is happening between Mexico and the United States, and I can tell you that we are living [through] horrible things. We must emphasize that violence is not fought with more violence because it is not a measure that really protects society and that, sometimes, is not understood very well.



GETTY

"Drugs and drug trafficking have not changed at all these past years—quite the contrary, violence has increased."

What is the main message of this movie?
I think there are many implicit messages, but I do not want the viewers to believe that it can be a real story because it is not. It is about actors developing in this alternate reality created by the writers. In effect, it does show situations based on reality, but it is simply a story of fiction.

How would you define Alejandro?
He is a man who seeks revenge, but at the same time, wants to rehabilitate himself. He is a character who is not typically 100 percent good, who wants to save the world, but who needs to correct his mistakes and understands that his family was killed by the leader of a cartel and now has two options in his hands: revenge or save a life.

Do you think showcasing drug trafficking on film and TV negatively influences the next generation?
In the case of this film, I do not believe it because it is a story for adults. We would be very irresponsible if we let children see this type of film. It is mainly for critical people, upper-level students who already have a criterion about violence. I am aware that there is a feeling in Latin America about these problems, but we must remember that it is only a fictional story.

Will there be a 'Sicario 3'?

The third part of "Sicario" is currently being filmed, as the sequel gives rise to another story, as reported by the screenwriter of "Sicario" and "Sicario: Day of the Soldado," Taylor Sheridan. The second part was directed by Italian filmmaker Stefano Sollima, unlike the first, which was under the direction of Denis Villeneuve. The third instalment is also set to feature the return of actress Emily Blunt, who starred in the 2015 original.

"Sicario: Day of the Soldado" opens in theaters June 29.

The politics of 'Sicario: Day of the Soldado'

Josh Brolin on the set of the "Sicario" sequel with director Stefano Sollima.
RICHARD FOREMAN, JR./SMPS

Denis Villeneuve's taut yet rollicking direction of Taylor Sheridan's intense script brought the very best out of the esteemed Emily Blunt, Josh Brolin and Benicio del Toro in "Sicario," while anything cinematographer Roger Deakins shoots is enough to instantly fall in love with, too.

That's why it was so exciting when its follow-up, "Sicario: Day of the Soldado," was announced. And even though Blunt and Villeneuve didn't return, the combined presence of Brolin and del Toro was more than enough to immediately entice. Especially since, in the sequel, Brolin's FBI agent and del Toro's mysterious operative are tasked with orchestrating a war between America and the Mexican drug cartels after terrorists start spilling over the border.

GETTY

But is "Day of the Soldado" a political movie? Director Stefano Sollima weighs in.

"I think in the movie, and in the movies I have done, there is a political aspect to it," he tells Metro. "A good movie should entertain you, but should have you thinking a little bit about the world that surrounds you. It is not the main objective of the movie, but it is political in the sense that it speaks about us and the real world."

The Bronx is booming

Taste all the ways the borough is standing shoulder to shoulder with any other at the Bronx Night Market.

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

Cardi B-approved clothing brand Bronx Native will preview its latest collection at the Bronx Night Market. PROVIDED

It takes a long time to shake off a tagline like "The Bronx Is Burning," but the Boogie Down borough has definitely turned a corner from the bad old days of the 1970s.

Signs of growth are absolutely everywhere in the borough — literally. Between 2010 and 2017, the Bronx was the fastest-growing county in all of New York state, with a population of 1.47 million people. High-profile developers have been planning and putting up towers at a feverish pace with attractions like breweries, rooftop skate parks and new public green spaces.

And in case you haven't heard, the next major shake-up in the Democratic party is coming from Bronx-born and -raised Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez.

But unless you live in the Bronx, you probably didn't know any of this was happening. That's where the Bronx Night Market, a new monthly event in Fordham Plaza launching on June 30, comes in. The all-Bronx showcase features food by more than 40 restaurants and small businesses, local vendors and artists selling their work, local breweries serving suds and local musicians playing.

City Tamale
FACEBOOK

"We're creating something we can all be proud of, not just within ourselves but something that can go toe to toe with Queens and Brooklyn," says Marco Shalma, founder of BLOX marketing and co-producer of the event with Edible Bronx magazine and the Fordham Business Improvement District. "Because we have the goods, we just have to make sure we put it out there the right way."

The stars of the market will be its food vendors, offering the traditional Latin and African flavors of the borough, as well as trendy vegan and gluten-free vendors, with dishes priced at $3, $5 and $7.

The Bronx is also in the midst of a brewery boom, and pioneers like the Bronx Beer Hall will be out with newcomers Bronx Brewery and Bronx Public to represent what's bubbling up.

It also helps that one person who's single-handedly lifted the Bronx's profile is pop culture sensation Cardi B, who grew up in the South Bronx and supports the borough by wearing clothes by local designers including Bronx Native, which will preview its latest collection at the market.

In fact, since BLOX announced the night market in May, so many people and businesses have come forward to take part that there's more interest than space to host them all. To get the full flavor of the Bronx renaissance, you'll just have to come up and experience it for yourself.

The Bronx Night Market will be held on the last Saturday of every month, starting June 30 through October, from 4-9 p.m. Admission is free.

John Tavares is highly coveted. GETTY IMAGES

Isles fans play waiting game with Tavares

Tavares will likely land an $11 million annual contract on the open market.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

John Tavares is officially on the clock.

The New York Islanders All-Star, captain, face of the franchise and pending unrestricted free agent has spoken with each of the six teams he'd scheduled meetings with between Monday and Wednesday.

Now comes the waiting.

Along with the Islanders, Tavares has listened to pitches from the Toronto Maple Leafs, Tampa Bay Lightning, San Jose Sharks, Boston Bruins and Dallas Stars.

The nerves are understandably present for Islanders fans. Things are finally starting to look up for this franchise for the first time in decades, after the hiring of Lou Lamoriello as president of hockey operations.

He's been busy in his first month, firing General Manager Garth Snow and Head Coach Doug Weight before bringing on Barry Trotz behind the bench, fresh off winning a Stanley Cup with the Washington Capitals earlier this month.

It's given optimism to a fan base that hasn't experienced consistent winning since four-straight Stanley Cups in the early 1980s.

But it's cautious optimism as Tavares' decision grips the hockey world.

The Islanders are the only team that could have offered Tavares an eight-year contract, thanks to the NHL's CBA. It's the slim advantage that the team attempting to retain the player gets.

So with it rumored that he will be offered a contract that ranges near $11 million annually, he's in for a hefty payday with the team that drafted him first-overall in 2009.

However, Tavares surely has plenty of other attractive options from teams that are closer to competing for a Stanley Cup, not to mention his hometown Maple Leafs.

To put it simply for Islanders fans, the closer it gets to July 1, when NHL teams can begin signing unrestricted free agents, the less likely the team has a chance to retain Tavares.

If it gets to Sunday at 12 p.m. ET and he's not an Islander, the organization has to face the sobering reality that it has to build a contender without one of the greatest players in its history.

John Tavares registered 84 points this past season with the Islanders, pumping in 37 goals to go along with 47 assists.

Knockout time

The knockout stage of the 2018 World Cup begins this weekend with two marquee matchups on Saturday. Ronaldo and Portugal will face Uruguay at 2 p.m. Eastern (Fox), while France will battle Argentina at 10 a.m. (Fox). For more on the World Cup action, please see Metro.us. GETTY IMAGES

EXPLORE BELFAST CITY

Searching for a dynamic city experience? Look no further than Belfast. Northern Ireland's capital city by the sea will charm you with its vibrant history (dating back to the Bronze Age!), its cutting-edge arts and culture, and its thriving culinary scene, not to mention its amazing activities and attractions to suit everyone's sense of adventure.

This charming metropolis is easily explored on foot. Stroll along storied cobblestone streets to admire impeccably restored Edwardian buildings or the baroque elegance of City Hall. Discover the creative-minded Cathedral Quarter, packed with cultural gems – like the MAC (Metropolitan Arts Centre), home to inspiring exhibitions and theatrical performances – plus eclectic eateries and spirited pubs that attract locals and visitors alike.

Speaking of food, better pack a healthy appetite. From elegant Michelin-starred restaurants to the sprawling St. George's Market, Belfast is full of flavors worth savoring. Set up the day with an Ulster fry – a traditional breakfast in Northern Ireland – before tasting your way through the city, which will no doubt leave you hungry for more.

History buffs are in for a treat. Take in the city's iconic political murals while on a Black Cab Tour. Delight in the Victorian grandeur of the Botanic Gardens, and soak up the tale of the Titanic – in the city where it was born – at the unforgettable Titanic Belfast.

If it's festive you want, it's festive you'll get in Belfast. The city is home to some of the best food, music and arts festivals in the region. You definitely won't want to miss the Belfast International Arts Festival from October 16 through November 4, but there is almost always something to celebrate in Belfast.

Go to Ireland.com/Belfast to start planning your trip.

This Is GAME OF THRONES® Territory

The eighth and final season of HBO's Game of Thrones® airs in 2019, but in the meantime, fans will love visiting 26 of the show's iconic filming locations in Northern Ireland. If you like a good cliffhanger, like the one at the end of season seven, visit Downhill Beach, where House Targaryen's ancestral home, Dragonstone, overlooks the sea. Are you a member of House Stark? Make sure you see Castle Ward in County Down, where you'll find the 16th-century ruin that stands in for Winterfell. A few more for your list: Antrim's Cushendun Caves is where Melisandre birthed the shadow assassin, and Shillanavogy Valley is where Daenerys became Khaleesi of the Dothraki.

Set off on your own self-guided journey through Game of Thrones® territory, or join a guided tour to get an exclusive behind-the-scenes look at filming locations. Die-hard fans will want to sign up for an immersive #GoTTerritory experience with themed adventures like archery, banquets and cycling through the Dark Hedges. You can even arrange to meet a couple of direwolves!

Visit Ireland.com/GameOfThrones to learn more and to plan your visit to Westeros in Northern Ireland.

Northern Ireland's Captivating Castles

Rent a car and embark on a driving tour of Northern Ireland's best-loved castles. These stony landmarks are open for exploring (and photographing) and are easily reached from Belfast.

Carrickfergus Castle

25 minutes from Belfast

This 800-year-old castle has been at the center of a power struggle for almost as long as it's been standing. Now it houses historical displays, including cannons from the 17th to 19th centuries.

Glenarm Castle

40 minutes from Carrickfergus

The home of Viscount and Viscountess Dunluce, Glenarm welcomes visitors year-round to the walled garden and working estate lined with forest, farmland and the meandering Glenarm River.

Dunluce Castle

1 hour from Glenarm

The imposing 17th-century ruins of Dunluce Castle teeter dramatically on basalt cliffs above booming surf, making it one of the most photogenic sites in all of Northern Ireland.

Enniskillen Castle

2 hours, 15 minutes from Dunluce

Once home to the powerful Maguire chieftains, Enniskillen houses the Fermanagh County Museum and the Regimental Museum of the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers today.
